The Lamps, however, to which Argand's principle has been applied, are subject to many inconveniencies, being either constructed with a fountain, so as to have the supply of been applied, are fubject to many inconveniencies, being either constructed with a fountain, to as to have the supply of oil above the burner, or, in perpendicular lamps, to have a large body of oil near the same, as a supply for the confumption. The inconveniencies of the fountain are obvious, being invariably subject to overslow from the expansion of air is the refervoir, whenever the room or apartment where they are placed becomes warm, and their horoing the earlier and earthy particles of the oil, before the since parts can reach the same, of consequence a crust gathers about the wick, which diminishes and obscures the sight, and makes it necessary to shuff it frequently, which, in many case, renders the Lamp very inconvenient. The perpendicular Lamp is still more limited, so large a body near the same causing so great a shade, as renders it almost useless. In consideration of these and other capital defects in Argans's Lamp, P. KEIR, after much study, has invented a Lamp, for which he has obtained Hh Minishy's Patient, which bids fair to answer every purpose to which Lamps can be applied.

It is so recombructed, that the slime is placed at a considerable degree of elevation above the body of the Lamp, so as to

It is fo confirurted, that the filme is placed at a confiderable degree of elevation above the body of the Lamp, fo as to remove the inconvenience of the great shade peculiar to perpendicular Lamps. At the same time, it supplies the confimption in the fame abundance as a fountain.

It has the quality also of burning the siner particles of the oil, and thereby continuing the buillance or the slame, is not subject to overslow, nor apt to go out of repair, and is so cleanly, that it may be used with the same freedom as a candle, without danger.

These Lamps are manufactured, and are now selling, by appointment of the Pateutee, at the shop of Mrs McQueen, tin-plate worker in Edinburgh, and no where else in Scotland, with a label affixed, "P. Keir, by His Majesty's Particular.

LAURIESTON PLACE.

To be FEUED at Lauriefton, Edinburgh, SIX SCOTCH ACRES of GROUND for Building on, the whole bying laid out according to a Plan.—The buildings, when complete, will form an elegant oblong Square, to be called LAURIESTON PLACE.

Each house will have besides a sufficient quantity of back ground soft, garden and offices.

The fituation is well known to be remarkably warm and dry, having a gentle declivity to the south, and commanding views both extensive and delightful. It is much nearer to the Crofs, to the Parliament-house, to the Exchequer, to the Boards of Custom and Excise, to the Public Banks, to the General Post Office, to the University, High School, &c. &c. than the ground at present feuing out in the New Town; and there is now easy and commodious access to both towns by the South Bridge on the east and north, and the Lathiantond on the west. The old city-wall, which greatly retarded the buildings on the south side of the town; is now removed. A new and elegant road, so feet wide, is began to be made from the Lothian-road to Bristo Port, by Laurieston; and at the sout of the ground there is an entry to the Meadow, one of the best public walks in the Kingdom.

There is pleasty of excellent water in the ground; and the senses are entitiest to have the town's water on the fame terms with those in the new-estended royalty.

The inhabitants will be exempted from several taxes to which those of the royalty of the city of Edinburgh are subjected, such as Stent on Trade, Ministers Stipend, &c. which last buden alone is no lets than six per cast upon the valued reat.

When the tyings were taken off in spring, the marks of them, though loosely put on, appeared upon the bark, which showed the circulation of the tap to be greatly impeded; the tree recovered slowly, and in nine of ten instruces, was incurable hide.

to be greatly impeded; the tree recovered flowly, and in nine of ten influees, was incurably hide-bound. The greafe and other oily fubliances flow the pores, and never fail to cramp, shrivel, and hide-bind the most thriving and healthy plants. If they survive, it is only to live as unseemly dwarfs.

Observing the resuse of the soot thrown our from the chemical works, carried on here in Nicol-son-street, it occurred to the writer of this notice.

fon-street, it occurred to the writer of this notice to make trial of it; and he is now able to say, that it is a complete remedy. In place of burting the tree like the things above mentioned, it proves to be a capital manure to it. Common foot is too light to lie at the foot of a tree; the other may be had in greater quantities; it is hatd, heavy, and adhefive; a cart load is solid at the works for a shilling, and consequently is worth carriage to great distances.—

A shovel full or too of this substance, laid about the foot of each tree in an orthward, renders the trees. foot of each tree in an orchyard, renders the trees for offensive to the hares, that not one of them will venture to approach, even in the most fewere feafons. The finell of the refuse is as strong as the unworked foot. After lying two years on the ground, I have found the effluvize continue fo strong after touching, that it was very difficult to get it off the hand. As there will be a parcel lying at the foot of every tree, the gardener, to make fure, may fewer the strong at any time, without the least injury to the plants, and thus a large orchyard may be faved for a triffe.

The proprietor of the works has no knowledge of or concern in this notice; it is given entirely for the benefit of the gardener and the planter; and it is hoped that the pityless method of destroying the poor harea in gins and traps may be prevented. — Cruelty in this case is ineffectual. Though sifty of them perish in torture by these means, two or three new comers will destroy the hopes of the planter in a very hort time. St Bernard's, near Edinburgh,

The body of troops assembling near Bender, will amount to 25000 men. From them, between 6 and 8000 men will be detached and polted along the Dneister. The line to extend near as far as Rankow.

Vienna, Nov. 3. Preparations for war are in no respect discontinued; and it is believed that our Sovereign will immediately fet out for Hungary. Baron de Rouvrai, General of artillery, is fet out from this capital, in order to join the grand army.

Letters from Hungary advise, that great movements are making for forming the Cordon. The regiment of Priets is gone to Illok; that of Anthony Esterhazy to Cheretziky; that of Nicholas Esterhazy to Patanka, and those of Latterman and Neugebauer and Alton, are on march for Sxigeth.

The Danube has overflowed in many places, and inundated the environs of this capital, the floods having reached the Red Bridge. Since yesterday the waters began gradually to subside.

Bydetters from Liutx, we are informed, that the overflowing of the Danube has occasioned very great damage. The rivers Ems and Traun are also rifen above the banks.

The Bridge of Branau is entirely carried away by the violence of the torrents.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. FRIDAY, Nov. 30.

AS foon as the Speaker had taken the Chair, he reported his Majesty's answer to the Address of that House of Thursday last, and which is as fol-" Gentlemen,

Which papers, the Chancellor of the Exchequer declared, he had received his Majesty's command to lay before the House.

The titles of these papers having been upon mo-tion, read at the table, Mr Pitt gave notice, that he should, on Friday next, move to have the several papers laid before the House on that day, and on the day fucceeding, taken into confideration. Mr Fox faid, he believed there was a paper exceedingly material for the information of the House, in order to enable them the more fully to comprehend the subject appointed for discussion next Friday, in the possession of his Majesty's Ministers, which was not among the papers already prefented, and that was, a copy of the declaration of the King of France to support the infurgents in Holland, which in his Majesty's Speech was stated to have been made to his Majesty. If his Majesty's Ministers had fuch a paper, he conceived there could be no objection to laying it on the table, more especially as it must obviously be explanatory of a very important fact. Since he was upon his legs, Mr Fox said, he would fave the House the trouble of hearing him a fecond time, and would mention another matter that required to be explained, either by the production of a paper, or in some other way; he declared he al-luded to that part of the Counter Declaration of the Court of France which refers to a paper of the King of Prusha, in which his Prushan Majesty imparted his resolution as therein mentioned. Without this paper was before the House, it was almost impossible clearly to understand the Counter Declaration, and therefore he hoped his Majesty's Ministers would either state its contents, or produce it.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer in reply faid, he could not fee for what reason the Copy of the Notification of the French, King stated in his Ma-jesty's Speech to have been the cause of the late preparations, was thought necessary to be laid upon the table, although a variety of reasons flashed upon his mind to prove that producing it would be highly improper. The fact was, the Notification in queftion was mixed with much other matter in an official dispatch, dated the 16th of September, and received from the Court of France by their Minister in London, and communicated by that Minister to his Majesty's servants, and read by them to his Majesty in Council. The other parts of the dispatch were certainly of a nature by no means proper, from the subjects they turned upon, to be laid upon the table; and as a copy of the part immediately stating the Notification would throw no new light upon the fact, nor more clearly illustrate it than what had been put into his Majelty's Speech upon the topick, he faw not the smallest use or advantage that could refult from producing it. With regard to the reference to the resolution of the King of Prussia, as mentioned to have been imparted in the Counter Declaration of the Court of France, he could almost from memory state the contents; but as memory ought not to be trutted to in a matter of fuch delicacy, he would take care to make himself fully matter of them against the day appointed for the discussion of the subject, and if it should be then thought necessary, would be prepared to give the House complete fatisfaction respecting it-

The House broke up at half past three o'clock, and adjourned till this day.

It is imagined fome conversation will take place this day relative to the mode of proceeding upon fuch papers as are at prefent laid before the House. There are at prefent only two days appointed for this week which will occasion debates in the House of Commons, viz. Wednesday and Friday next; the first upon the treaty with Hesse Cassell, and the last to consider the papers respecting the armament and equipment; but in all probability every day may turn out a day of business.

The following is a correct amount of the totals of the four estimates presented to the House of Comnons by Mr Pitt, o on Friday last, of the expences of the late armament.

The Commons mean, before the recess at Christmas, to vote the Navy and Army, pais the Land-Tax and Malt bill, and take into confideration the feveral papers respecting the Convention between his Majesty and the Most Christian King, with other papers laid before that House on Thursday last, which, we hear, will take up the attention of the House till Friday se'ennight; and about Wednesday formight both Houses will adjourn until the 31st of January next.

he new French Ambaffador to the States Gene ral, is still at Antwerp, where he may possibly remain for a long time. The reason assigned for his not proceeding to the Hague is, that he cannot confider the States General as a free and fovereign afheart of their country, and governs it as he pleafes. He waits, therefore, till the Prussians stall have evacuated the Dutch territories, when he expects that all the Duke of Erunswick's army has been hitherto doing, will be completely undone in less than a month's time.

France has had three complete bankruptcies within the present century. In the year 1720, when Law's Missisppi scheme was adopted by the Duke of Orleans, with a view to annihilate great part of the government paper, the debt contracted by the wars of Louis XIV. was to enormous, that the cuflomary revenue of the country could fcarcely pay a shilling in the pound. In the war before last, the King's plate, and that of the church and nobles, was melted down to maintain their fleets and ar mies; and now we again fee fuch a deficiency of refources, as would drive any other country to defpair. Such repeated failures must give a lasting blow to the credit of France, and will prevent monied men, of all descriptions, from trusting that government in future, while it direds the attention of foreigners of every country, to prefer the public fecurities of Great Britain, which from the first establishment of the Bank, and the first creation of a public debt, has been found equal to every de-

The Emperor of Germany has granted commif-fions to feveral noblemen, for rating new corps for his services; of these Baron de Gersdorf is to raise one of 1200 men. His Imperial Majefty has taken two other steps which strongly indicate war. One is that he has issued a proclamation prohibiting under the most fevere penalties, the exportation of any kind of corn whatfoever, not only from the kingdom of Hungary, but also from all his Majetty hereditary dominions. The other is, that he caused the States of Hungary to meet last month, and while they were fitting, with the Count de Palfy, the Lord High Chancellor of the kingdom at their head, Meif. d'Urmeny and Mocripodary, his Majesty's Commissioners, were introduced to them, and made a demand in their mafter's name, of the number of recruits usually furnished by Hungary at the beginning of the war. The States, with the greatest chearfulness, voted unanimously the number required of them by their Sovereign; and his Majesty has actually given directions that on account of the warlike preparations in Hungary, all the public works which were carrying on in the different provinces of that kingdom, be sufpended till further orders.

When the united forces of the Emperor of Germany and Empress of Rusha are contrasted with those of the Sukan, every one must see that if the fupported by some great powers, must necessarily be driven out of Europe. The Austrian army consists of nearly 300,000 men, the most regular and best discipling in the world. That of Russia forms 350,000; but, as great numbers of these are Calnauks and other irregular troops, the Russian army ought not to be estimated at more than 200,000 regulars. The Ottoman forces of all denominations amount to 447,454 men, of whom 207,400 are infantry. But in this number are included 170,000 men employed in the navy; and in Constantinople and some neighbouring cities, where their presence is absolutely necessary, to keep the populace within bounds: so that the Turks cannot bring into the field more than 277,454 men; a force infinitely too fmall to cope with 500,000 of the finest troops in Europe.

Able generals, who have feen the Austrian troops do not helitate to fay, that, at the head of the 160,000 men, whom the Emperor is now affembling gary, they would not be whole force, regular and irregular, that the Ottoman empire can oppose to them.

By advices received from the island of St Vincent it appears, that his Majesty's lately appointed Governor, Colonel Seton, had not only met with the most cordial marks of respect and esteem on his arrival from all ranks of people there; but that after-wards, at the meeting of the legislature, on the 25th of August, a perfect considence, and most ardent zeal for objects of essential utility, had been reciprocally displayed; fo that the prospect of future harmony, and prosperity in that colony, was highly flattering; but we have to regret, that the speech of Governor Seton, and the addresses of the Council and Affembly, however deferving of publication, are of roo great length to be here inferted.

Spa is in great disorder, on account of the exactions of the Prince Bishop of Liege. He granted a privilege to the gambling house there for the annual tribute of 70,000 florins, in consequence of which another was established in opposition to it.— The old rooms were deferted; and the Bishop, to infare the payment of the tax, ordered some troops, with two pieces of cannon, to march to Spa, and enforce the attendance of the strangers, as well as natives at the privileged rooms. This was a new speciacle presented, of men being dragooned into gambling, and a Bishop not only encouraging vice,

When they came to the place, Goward embraced his wife and wished her well, upon which she returned the compliment.— White declared himself extremely well satisfied, and White declared himlest extremely west tatistics, and paid down the money, affuring the quondam husband it was good and full weight.—The purchase being completed, White gave the ringers a hand-fome treat to ring a peal, and they spent the remainder of the day with the greatest joy imagin-

TREATY with HESSE CASSEL.

This Treaty, after the usual preliminaries, stipulates, that the Landgrave shall hold in readness for his Majesty's service 12,000 men, during the space of four years, in two divisions, the first consisting of 8000, and the other 4000 men. The first di vision is to confift of infantry, to which his Screne Highness may add 1000 cavalry, if he thinks pro-per, and he reserves to himself the liberty of head-

The first division is to be ready to march at sour weeks notice, and the second at fix weeks, if prac-

The King of Great Britain engages to pay for every trooper 80 banco crowns, and for every foot foldier 30 banco crowns, within 13 days after the requifition to march shall have been made;—the crown to be computed at four shillings and nine-pence three farthings English money.

The subsidy to be 150,000 banco crowns per annum, during the four years certain, and from the time of making the requisition, 450,000 banco crowns per annum, and during the whole time that the troops shall be in his Majesly's service, the Landgrave is to receive an annual fublidy of 225,000 banco crowns.

In case a larger body than 12,000 men should be required, the tublidy is to be increased in proportion, and it is to be paid quarterly.

His Majefty is to make good all loffes of men, guns, &c. and to pay the expence of remounting and recruiting the corps,

The Landgrave has most probably made a good bargain, and for it appears to be. For he has 150,000 crowns a year, for four years certain, without being at a farthing-expence, and a flipu fation for greater advantages and a full indemnifica-tion in case he should be called upon to fulfill his engagements !

Tuesday last, the Theatrical season opened here, with All in the Wrong, and the Critic; being by the defire of the Right Hon. Lord Elcho, Grand Mafter Mason of Scotland, who, with a number of the Members belonging to the Grand Lodge, and other Lodges in town, honoured the Theatre with their company. Shakespeare box, properly decoratheir company. Shakespeare box, properly decora-ted, was allotted for the reception of the Grand Lodge, and part of the Pit was railed in for the rest of the Brethren. Lord Elcho was supported in the Shakespeare on the right by the Lord Provost of Edinburgh, and on the left by Sir William Forbes; Bart. Upon this occasion, Mrs Brooks made her sist appearance on the Edinburgh stage, in the cha-racter of Belinda; and, from the various and ex-tensive powers she then exhibited, there is little doubt of her becoming a great favourite, with the doubt of her becoming a great favourite with the public, and confequently a valuable acquisition to the Manager. She was received throughout the ardu-ous character of Belinda with every mark of approbation and applaufe by a brilliant audience; nor did they with hold, from their old acquaintances, who filled up the other parts of the drama, and which were supported with great abilities, the same liberal testimony of their entire satisfaction. A slattering proof, that however apt people in general are to be fond of novelty, yet that the judicious and difern-ing Edinburgh audience will never fail to reward real merit, however long the possessor of it may have remained among them. It must be acknowledged, at the fame time, to the honour of the manager, that he never less flip an opportunity of indulging the public curiofity, by bringing forward, as often as possible, the first rate performers from other Theatres.

Now that St Andrew's steeple is finished, and proves fo great an ornament to the city, it will 'no doubt be much regretted, if the sleeple to the West Church, projected some time ago, is not now set a bout. It never can be carried forward with so much advantage as at prefent, as the scaffolding now taking down from St Andrew's Church might be ob tained upon much easier terms than could otherwise tanea upon much eather terms than could otherwise be expected; and, to so tich a body of heritors as those of the West Church parish, this desirable ob-ject would be but a trifle.—Arnot, in his emertain-ing history of Edinburgh, speaking of the West Church, says, "this is the mast populous parish in Scotland, and the landholders in general men of o-sulfaces," and although we are not acceptable. pulence; and although we are not to expect that modern Protestants should confecrate structures to the Deity, equal in magnificence to Grecian temples, yet it were to be wished that some distinction was made between a Church and a Barn."

On the 28th ult. a call was moderated in the Affociate Congregation of Montrole, when the call came out unanimously for the Rev. Mr John Kyle of Kinrols. The moderation was conducted with great propriety, by the Rev. Mr John Auchinclofs, from Liff, who preached a most excellent fermon from Jude, ver. 3.—" Beloved, Contend earneffly for the faith once delivered to the faints."

A correspondent observes, that the attention of the community is wholly directed to the education and religious improvement of boys; while girls are as much neglected, as if they had no existence, or were of no importance to fociety. Since the gen-tlemen have so notoriously manifested their partiality, the ladies ought to interpole in favour of their own fex. Let some active and public-spirited females therefore meet, raife a subscription, and, without delay, institute schools for the improvement of girls.

SIR,

THE Prince was young, handlome, gay, amorous, and gallant: in a private flation he would have been a favourite; judge then whether he was unfortunate as a Prince. All of a fudden he became pensive, retired, and melancholly; his health was thought to be in danger; hillorians, poets, painters, pancers, parafites, academicians, fine ladies; in short, all the world, repaired to the Court of the Prince's uncle, as to the place of future fovereignty. The King and Queen were afarmed; the faceby were consulted, and gave it as their opinion, that the nerves of his Royal Highness were relaxed, and that it was absolutely necessary to make him engage in fome active pursuit. He might conquer a kingdom, or two or three provinces at least, at the head of or two or three provinces at least, at the head of A00,000 men properly appointed; he might go to Newmarker, study whist; turn circumnavigator, academician; in short, any thing but idleness. Varieties of action being proposed to the Prince, he declared for war. The whole corps diplomatique took the alarm. It was answered to the ambasiadors of every potentate in Europe, Asia, Africa, and America, that no design was formed against any of their masters. The minister of she was department was ordered to have in readiness an army of 20,000 men, half dragoons half infantry, with a fuitable train, and pioneers. To conquer a kingdom, or even a few provinces with fuch an army, was a problem of no eafy folution. The Prince, however, began his march, and in a few days pitched his camp in the midth of a Royal forest, containing a containing and containing a containing and containing and containing and containing a containing a containing and containing a conta gan his march, and in a few days putched his camp in the midft of a Royal foreff, containing 200,000 acres of land. This great tract was much in the flate in which it had been left by the flood of Noah. It had fome deer and other game, and abounded with trees, tho' not of the best fort. The country abounded with limestone, and turf or peat to burn it. Lime, and the manute arifing from 12,000 horfe, and an army of 20,000 men, belides women, children, furfars, &c. were no despicable means of improvement. to which we add abundance of timber, to defend young hedges. Immediately, a large garden was dreffed, and filled with kitchen-stuff fufficient for the state. The plough, the harrow, the pade, the pick at were all successfully handled by prince and soldiery. At the end of the campaign, 20,000 acres of land were sown with whear. To Deum was fung; and the Prince returned to Court with health perfectly re-established. He was quite ido-lized; and the Court of his uncle became defolate. Edin. Nov. 29. 1787.
